Faronics Expands with New UK Office

MAIDENHEAD, UK, September 16th, 2009 — Faronics, leading provider of solutions delivering total workstation reliability, complete system control and non-disruptive computer energy management, announced today the opening of its European Subsidiary office in the United Kingdom. The expansion will assist Faronics in better supporting customers and channel partners in the region while accommodating the rapid growth of their European business. Despite global economic uncertainty, Faronics continues its steady growth by allowing its customers to increase the productivity of existing technology investments and dramatically lower IT operating costs.

The new Faronics Channel Account Manager, Alex Buxareo heads the UK office, located in Maidenhead, south east of London. Buxareo brings extensive knowledge on software and channel sales throughout Europe. Prior to his arrival at Faronics, Alex managed emerging markets channel sales for five years at Quest Software. "Having worked in software for many years, I am excited to join a company with products that deliver 100% workstation availability and intelligent PC power management. I look forward to spearheading the expansion of our Channel Partner program in Europe," said Buxareo.

"The launch of the UK office represents a significant milestone in continual growth of our business and a great opportunity to sustain our strong international presence as a leading software solution provider on a global scale," said Kristina Bell, Vice President, International Sales.

Faronics has established itself as an industry leader in software solutions that manage and secure end-user computing environments, and eliminate computer energy waste.
